TIPS TO IMPROVE YOUR SCARS

All scars get worse in the sun. As humans, it's difficult to completely avoid the sun so do your best and always apply SPF30+ sunscreen and/or cover your scar as much as possible if concerned with your scar.

As well as using ScarMD® Scar Gel & Spray, massage the scar with a simple moisturizing cream. Use a simple cream with no perfumes or additives in.

Don't massage ScarMD® Scar Gel & Spray into the area. Apply a thin layer and leave it to dry.

If you have a history of scarring then use ScarMD® Scar Gel & Spray as soon as the wound has healed. Early use of ScarMD® Scar Gel has been proven to reduce the chance of scars developing by up to 60%.<sup>5</sup>

If you think that you have a Keloid scar then speak to a Dermatologist, Plastic Surgeon or Scar Specialist, who will advise the best combination treatments to use with ScarMD® Scar Gel & Spray.

ScarMD® has Solutions for all types of Scars

creates an ultra-thin invisible barrier, with similar breathability of your skin, this modifies the factors involved in healing to normalize the production of collagen, preventing the formation of abnormal scarring by creating the optimal environment for your skin to heal.

ADVANCED STRETCH MARK THERAPY SYSTEM

ScarMD® Prevention Oil, will minimise the risk of developing Stretch Marks while ScarMD® Repair Cream can prove its effectiveness at not only reducing the redness of the stretch mark but also improving the indentation, leaving the skin smoother, flatter, less red and more like the skin that you remember before the Stretch Marks.

WHAT ARE THE DIFFERENT TYPES OF SCARS?

ATROPHIC SCARS:

These scars are usually indented and result from acne or chicken pox. These scars are notoriously difficult to treat and ScarMD® Silicone Scar Gel will not be effective against these scars. Other treatments have been proven to work and some are available from the makers of ScarMD® Silicone Scar Gel.

BURN SCARS:

The majority of burns will cause scars as they tend to heal slower than most other types of wounds. Burn scars are actually hypertrophic scars. Early treatment is recommended and the use of Silicone scar gel plus massage normally produces the best outcome.

HYPERTROPHIC SCARS

The majority of people that scar develop Hypertrophic scars. These are red and raised, generally along the length of the injury.

KELOIDS

Keloids are a different type of scar to the above and tend to be harder to treat. Keloids are normally formed after a trauma or wound, but spread away from the original wound. Very light skin and very dark skin tend to be more prone to Keloids and it is believed to be a genetic link to the formation of keloids.
